BASIC SQL Management Screenshot: A: If you want to open a file and execute a query on it just use ofstream and fstream. ofstream outFile; outFile.open("output.csv", ios_base::out); string myQuery = "INSERT INTO employees VALUES(7, 'Tom', 12, 'pitt');"; outFile 't be an expert at anything. ...i think i'm kind of an idiot". It's not even at the point where i'm telling them they're wrong to disagree with me. It's not even that my predictions are wrong. They simply are in themselves. The "predictions" are just "crap" and "only my opinion". So there's that. The reason that i'm so frustrated is that they have insisted on keeping me and forcing me to listen to them, but they don't even understand that what they're saying is not making any sense. And i can't figure out how to get them to understand it. I'm not saying that what they're saying is a bunch of bull*. It's just that... I've reached the point where I'm at right now. I honestly don't know what to say anymore. I've reached the point where I've spent years just learning what it is that they are talking about. I've spent years listening to them talk about things, and being able to understand what they are talking about. I've spent years explaining to them all of this, about how the world works. I've spent years and years of my life getting to know everything that they think about, because it

Category:SQLQ: Communication between DAL/BLL and View
I'm a newbie in C#/WPF/VB.net and I'm building a C#/WPF/VCL app to allow users to create diagrams. The UI is done and there's no issues there. As I'm new to WPF/VB.net I'm not familiar with the concept of DAL/BLL and View. So please don't point me to any sample code because I can't understand most of it. At first I was going to write my own classes to handle the data but then I figured since I'm already using EF, why not use it's capabilities and just let EF handle the relations. I'm using the ADO.NET Entity Framework. I'm trying to find a way to pass objects from BLL or DAL to my View so the user can edit them. Any suggestions? Edit: I'm aware of using Model. I just want to know if there's any way to actually pass/receive data to my View. A: I do not have a specific answer for you, but I would recommend creating a generic repository and then composing your domain object with that. This way, you have a common foundation that all of your business logic is built on. You can then inject your repository into whatever class you need. There is an excellent free example of this repository and business logic model out there. Check it out: Hope this helps.
